learning from links to improve ESDGC learning

Parallel teacher workshops ... in Cardiff and Llandudno

To promote ESDGC practice in schools that makes effective use of Links so they contribute to learning and the school improvement agenda.

An opportunity to ~

- share experiences from different schools
- work creatively on teaching ideas and resources
- reflect on your own learning about Africa and the MDGs

A workshop bringing together ~

- School practitioners [primary and secondary] including those coordinating ESDGC or with lead roles in School Links
- School practitioners with first hand experience of Africa
- People from NGOs and local Africa community link groups with interest in supporting an education dimension to their Link

An opportunity for those with experience to take stock and those new to this work to learn from that experience. An opportunity for us all to work together to take on the learning challenges presented by Estyn and show how this work can contribute to literacy, numeracy and communication skills.

Greeting Archbishop Tutu during his recent visit to Wales the First Minister said ....

“Wales for Africa is not a one way street where people from Wales simply travel to Africa, but a special initiative that allows those of us in Wales to gain a deeper knowledge of the problems facing the continent and bring lessons and knowledge back home to the benefit of all of us.”

These workshops will consider the nature of that knowledge, how we enable learners to understand different perspectives and develop their skills to engage with the issues?

They will focus of teaching and learning needs - eg through:
